

PCE 2010 – Venice, Italy

9th World Conference for Person-Centered and Experiential Psychotherapy and Counseling

We have considered various suggested topics for the PCE 2010 and are leaning towards: Empowerment: The politics of the helping relationship. This topic suggests an awareness of the issues among the different tribes of PCA and Experiential Psychotherapies and Counseling, the issues and relationships with other paradigms, the issues of how we deal with the larger society and our way of being and doing in terms of design and management of the various settings: psychotherapy, counselling, research, training, intercultural relationships, education, parenting, play, and other modalities.

We would like to receive your suggestions and feed back on this theme or other ideas by mail: PCE2010@iacp.it

Why Venice?

Venice proposes a logistic solution different from that offered by the various sites in the world.

On account of its peculiar urban layout, "made to Man's measure", Venice enables the organization of the events in a functional manner, offering special solutions which makes it possible to combine the artistic historic background of this city unique in the world with the needs marking the event.

The water, element around which since the fourteenth century Venice has grown up, unlike other cities congested by traffic, allows a precise programming of connections and transports to the great benefit of the logistic functionality of the event.

Reaching Venice

Venice is easily accessible by train, bus, car, ship and airplane.

- The new Marco Polo International Airport, the third busiest one in Italy following Rome and Milan, is served by more than 45 airline companies and is approximately two hours from major European cities and less than one hour from Rome and Milan. A number of low costs flights are also available at Treviso Airport (25 km away).
- Two highways depart from Venice: one towards Trieste, the other towards Milan.

From Venice Airport you can reach 66 international and domestic destinations:
